piercing, blade-like, into the very heart of the rebellion.

Some have regarded Petersburg as the great atumbilise block in Grant's way. It remains yet to be seen whether it will not prove of more arrives to Grant than to Lec. If Grant can use it to draw off rebel troops from the defrees of Riemmond, Settlering als stool pigeon at Petersburg, while he springs his not at the capital, Jeff Davis may yet say of his attempt to cope with him at the East, as he did of Donelson and Vicksburg, that "the Confederacy had attempted too much-more than it was able to perform." Peasibly Richmond could not long survive the execution of Petersburg, Grant could close in around its southwester's communications and cut aff its supplies. But we donnt not Grant prefers the present positions of his army with Fort Darling and the thir y torts of Petersburg for behind him, occupied by arbeit croops, to their execution. They are now no more in his way than the roughness of the bark when the wedge of the rall-splitter is cleaving its way into the heart wood.

HOW INTERNET CAN VOIR POR There are peculiar reasons why every in chilgent Triebmen ought to vote for Liucoln sope that Ireland will yet shake off the shalls of foreign oppression, and rise above the evils of domestic facts, must fraw their anglesitor from the example of one-country, and can look for effective aid and comfort only to a united and powerful American Reand can look for effective aid and comfort only to a united and powerful American Republic. One of the very reasons why the English aristocraer, represented by the London Times and the English expitalists and debt holiers represented by the Rothschilds and Anguat Belmont, sympathise with the rabels and justify the Cooper-heads and electioneer for McUlellan, is that they want to break down the power of the United States, for fear it may prove fatal to their hold on Ireland and British America. Already the London Times confesses that to save the latter they could not afford to fight a single battle, much less a campaign, against a soldier of sirant's way of fighting. Could from a revolution headed by Meagher or some even younger Irish pairiot, and in which the Federal Government would had the smac kind of "neutrality" which the British Government have maintained in this war? Wage McClellan elected and the Union divided, Great Britain would continue to rivet her chains upon Ireland for generations to come. The Irish people in this country would be too much occupied in fighting out the endless civil wars which would result from disunion, to give any individual aid to their brethern at home, and nose of the separate contederacies into which we might split would be regarded by Europe, except as instance of the failure of Republican democracy, and a proof of the wisdom of aristocratic oppression. Our Union gone and the hope of a Free Ireland is gone forever.

sions of the compromise would be that pixtes should be detasaded, and in shorth the three should have it all their own way.

On the contrary, should Lincoln be reciected, the war carried forward to its triumphart conclusion, rebellion suppressed, and its leaders and abettors punished, the very next step would be for our government, presenting them a strength nurivalled by any power on earth, to demand of Iraisan's old enemy, the British aristocrais and debtholders, that they pay for all damages to our commerce inflicted by the so called rebellpins; which areas remeded a rebel portion of the those of Lords itself. Would British healtate? She would, Would she refuse? Very likely! Then "England's extremity would be free. Even should no war arise directly between the Federal Government between all directly between the Federal Government and Great British, but if Ireland should rebel, with no other than individual aid from Americans, the Government would only bave to permit the same system of "neutral privateering" against British commerce, which Great British has carried on deving this rebellion as proposed by Mr. Lincoln, and would all in the event, either of a composite to Irish aution as a free andiadelphone of the Debellion, as proposed by Mr. Lincoln, and would fall in the event, either of a composite to Irish aution of the Irishellion, as proposed by the policy wing, or of a discolution of the Union, as proposed by the posee wing of the rebel rid Democracy.

Again, observe that every Irishman in the Northera States, by salling to New York, instead of the class States in which to remain the came here, and by shoosing the free intended to the little state of the class States in which to remain the came here, and by shoosing the free intended to the little state and the contraint war Democrats for office in the lease of the Charles of the Char by the peace wing of the rebel rid Democracy.

Again, observe that every Iriahman in the Northern States, by asiling to New York, instead of the clare States in which to remain, declared his conviction unmistakably that for him, he wife, and children, freedom was better than sisvary. He asserted that he would not work side by side with the slave, where labor was degraded and living wage anderbid, and, therefore, could not be had. He knows that it is not the color of the skin that makes labor unworthy, for the siaves whom he left in the old world were white. He fled allke from the employment of British aristocrata, and of Southarn slaveholding. Democrats, more aristocratic than the British objective and not the alive year a lifehrman has which he would not have had if he had remained in Ireland, or if he had migrated to the Southern States, and worked among the poor wifet trash in competition with shaves—in whatever degree his home is more comfortable, his children better deacated, or his future prospect brightmed, he is indabled for it all to those likes and institutions of Northern freedom of which Abraham Lincain is the positical regree the duty of Iriahmen to support emancipation in americs; left him reflect on the interest old Irriband has in the preservation of the South was and mostitutions of Northern freedom of which Abraham Lincain is the positical regree the duty of Iriahmen to support emancipation in americs; left him reflect on the interest old Irriband has in the preservation of the flation, and let him yote for Liucoln and liberary, and reproject that for the color of the flation, and let him yote for Liucoln and liberary, and reproject heightness that futition of many profession of whom have been dealed our care, and the little Mac, and show of the same color of which Abraham Lincain is the positical regree to the South who here saided our care, and the little Mac, and show of the color of which Abraham Lincain is the positical regree to the South who here saided our care, and the little Mac, and trifind has in the preservation of the n, and let him you for Liucoln and lib-and reputies that faction of undemo-tration which is supported by exhibitors and eveny of treland in the peace in the lit present by the august by foreign for that, and it is not unlikely he imagined that the President agreed with him in these matters, as he supposed was the case in the Rockville haranger. Moreover, the clarge is that the negotiation was conducted by scother member of the Blair family. Quite likely; and it is still more probable that that member of the Blair family, who had not, at that time, esseed to fancy that he was the President.

There is one way to settle this question. If Gen. McClellan was offered an important commisme, or if he was effected the War Department, as a constition of his "turning his back on the proposals of the peace justo st Chicago," he must know it, and he must have the means of proving it. Let him produce that proof or let him at least say that it is so. And when he gets ready to make the statem nt, we trust that he will find language less involved than Mr. Blair's to put Lincoln.

127 Poplar Grove Church, near which Gen. Meade has taken position, is on the Rillroad from Petersburg to Lynchburg and Danville, called the South Side Railroad. If Meade's position commands this road, as we suppose it does, Petersburg has now no connection with the South, axcept through Richmond. How long can the city be held, unless Meade is disloted of the Democratic pirty we wish to be desistedly nederstood as chodenning all interserence with public meetings.

The next number of that Copperhead print contained the following gentle and peaceable selvice to the Copperhead rowdies and loaders of New York:

"We gall upon all Democratic clubs and other Democratic organizations paradiag the city before now and next decision day to make it their expectal business to possible Republican head-questers at the corner of Thempthird and B orders, and to appear by greams as they pass their observations, or that it is their excelled by the contained of the contained the contain

General Kearney on McClellan.

[From Wilkes' Spirit of the Times.]

As the Presidential campaign prograsses, we commend the almost dying works of General Pulip Kearney on McClellan and his merits, to the deliberate refaction of the people of New Jersey. General Kernes', who was a stanch Domorest, expressed in several letters, which be wrote during the Peninsula campaign, an unqualified condemnation of McClellan's strategy and conductates and in speaking of the Young Napoleon, that the campaign was being "fought by diblots," that the army was "under the control of imbeellity, or southing cores," and that, soldler as he was, he could almost his heart was back again to his quiet home in Jersey. One of these memorable letters closes with the emphate declaration. "I tell you that McCletten to burnt out?" It should be the sucred task of the patriots of New Jersey, to render the sainted Kearney's words prophete in his hastive State, during the approaching verdict of November. If he is barnt out in Jersey, we may safely predict he will not be the recipioni of a single electoral vote.
